ONE OF LINCOLN'S FAIREST DAUGHTERS

JOINED IN WEDLOCK'S BONDS TO MT. STERLING YOUNG MAN—THE WOODS—PERSON WEDDING.

Before hundreds of those who have known her from childhood, and knowing her, have loved her dearly Miss Sally Taylor Woods, became the bride of Grover C. Anderson, of Mt. Sterling, Thursday afternoon at three o'clock. The ceremony, a beautiful one, in every detail, was performed in the Baptist church by Rev. J. E. Jones, the pastor. Immediately after the work was pronounced which joined these young lives they took an automobile for Danville where they boarded a Southern train for an eastern trip after which they will go to Mt. Sterling to make their home.

New bride, as fair have ever gone from the borders of dear old Lincoln, famed for the beauty of her women and the gallantry of her men. And no more beautiful married couple could be pictured than was the happy pair who were the wedding procession moved stately down the aisle to the altar where the mystic words were said. Loving hands had made the home of God a home of love and beauty for the happy occasion. The altar was a perfect mass of green, potted plants, ferns and smiling faces. The ceremony was performed in a beautiful manner. The bride, dressed in white, with a long veil, and the groom, in a dark suit, stood before the altar. The wedding party consisted of the bride and groom, the best man, the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids. The ceremony was a beautiful one, and the wedding party was a large one.

The church was crowded with friends and loved ones when the hour appointed. Just before the wedding party came in, Mrs. W. C. Shank, sang softly and tenderly the "Garden of Roses" accompanied on the organ by Miss Sue Taylor Englemann. Then to the glorious wedding chorus from Lohengrin the wedding procession began. First came the bride and groom, followed by the bridesmaids, the maid of honor, and the best man. The ceremony was a beautiful one, and the wedding party was a large one.

FARES REDUCED

Q. & C. Route Places Parlor Car Fares Between Danville and Cincinnati At 25 Cents.

Parlor car fares on Queen & Crescent trains between Danville and Cincinnati have been reduced from 60 to 25 cents for each way. The round trip parlor car fare is now fifty cents, whereas it was formerly $124. The rate from Danville to Lexington is 20 cents each way. Trains between Danville and Cincinnati are now equipped with modern observation parlor cars. It is worth many times the price just now to pass over the High Bridge and get a perfect view of the monster new structure that has been reared over the old one. The parlor car rates named for the Blue Grass are much appreciated being less than half cost of Pullman fares, although the parlor car is decidedly the most comfortable and delightful coach on any of the superb trains operated by the Queen & Crescent. With the reduced rate effective it is predicted that many of the trains will often have to carry two parlor cars between Danville and Cincinnati in order to accommodate the extra traffic that will be attracted by the nominal charge.

Stanford Wins

The good news was received from Springfield, Wednesday night, that in first bat game at the Itine Grass High School tournament now on, Stanford had defeated Hardtown by a score of 10 to 3. Wesley Embury, pitching for Stanford, held the Nelson county boys to one hit. This is regarded as very fine work and is believed to be indicative of the ease with which the Stanford entries in the tournament will walk off with things in the other events. Springfield and Lawrenceburg were to play Thursday and Stanford may be the winner for final championship on Friday.

Outsiders

WATCHING THE SENATORIAL FIGHT.

James Sutters in Comparison with Paynter. A Big Newspapers View the Two Candidates.

Frankfort, Ky., June 8.—The big newspapers of the country are watching with a good deal of interest the fight being waged in Kentucky between United States Senator, Thomas H. Paynter and Congressman O. H. James for the seat in the Senate now empty occupied by the late James, and their comment on the methods of Mr. James in his campaign should be of interest to the Democratic voters as giving them an insight into what the people of other states think of the man and the character of content he is waging as well as giving their opinions of Paynter as a statesman and member of the Senate.

In a recent comment, Leslie's Weekly said of James: "It is too bad that we have so many of the Ollie James type in our legislative bodies—who think there is nothing in the world for a public man to do but to seek to gain political advantage, to capture votes and to attract attention."

The Chicago Inter-Ocean, discussing the Lerman case, says: "That Senator Paynter should appeal to his colleagues to act as judges, considering the law and facts only, and disregarding alike the clamor of faction and the menaces of power, is entirely natural when we remember the life and character of the man."

A Washington dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer at the time the "long and short haul" railroad proposition was before the United States Senate, a year ago, read: "Senator Aldrich was completely routed upon the long and short haul proposition in the open Senate this afternoon. By a vote of 57 to 10 the Paynter amendment, declaring it unlawful for a railroad to charge more for a short haul than for a longer haul was adopted." This is the same Mr. Aldrich with whom Congressman James would have Kentucky Democrats believe Senator Paynter is in league.

Another Washington dispatch, this time to the Louisville Courier-Journal relative to the Employers' Liability Amendment, introduced by Senator Paynter, which provides that no case arising under this act and brought in any state court of competent jurisdiction shall be moved to any court of the United States, says: "The adoption of this amendment is regarded as of great importance, because it is a step toward restoring to the states the rights and control of matters which have been claimed by the Democrats to be the rights of the states under the Constitution. Heretofore efforts to modify Federal laws so as to give state courts jurisdiction of matters arising under acts of Congress and to change the law as to removal of actions from State to Federal courts have been ineffectual."

Senator Paynter's work in securing this amendment, Senator Hoar, a leader in the upper branch of Congress, said: "This is a noteworthy advance in the direction of maintaining the constantly dwindling force of State jurisdiction and State control. I congratulate the Senate upon having taken the first step in the right direction."

John C. O'Laughlin, one of the brightest and best known newspaper men at the National Capitol, recently reviewed Senator Paynter's brief career in the Senate. At one point he wrote:

"When Paynter arrived in Washington he quickly made himself felt in the Senate Chamber and was given an honor extended to few new Senators, being placed upon the important Judiciary Committee. The Senator has been active in connection with the tariff and the Federal incorporation bill. He strongly advocated lower duties on all materials used by the press, insisting it was important to the Nation that independent newspapers should flourish. He also has shown a marked knowledge of international law as well as ordinary law. In short, he is regarded as a valuable addition to the United States Senate."

The foregoing gives in brief fashion the opinion from outside Kentucky of Senator Paynter's worth as a member of the Federal Senate from Kentucky showing that, from the first he has taken front rank among the leaders or thought in the Nation, and is today in position where he can accomplish much, if retained in his position, not only of benefit to the State and Nation but add to the lustre of Kentucky, which has furnished many of the country's greatest statesmen.

RAIL ROAD CONVENTION HERE MONDAY

LINCOLN COUNTY SOLIDLY AGAINST KLAIR, AND MAY GO FOR KEENEON.

Chairman George L. Penny has received official notification from J. Norton Fitch, chairman of this railroad district, to call a mass convention of the democrats of Lincoln county at the court house next Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock for the purpose of selecting 10 delegates to attend the Second District Railroad Convention which will be held in Louisville, June 14, to nominate a candidate for Railroad Commissioner.

Little interest seems to be taken in this race in Lincoln county but every democrat who has been heard to express himself, has done so against the nomination of Lilly Klair, of Lexington, who is a candidate for the nomination. Klair is chiefly notorious for having bolted the nomination of former Governor Heckham, for United States Senator while he, Klair was a member of the Legislature from Lexington. Klair is also notorious by reason of the close friendship he always showed for the railroads, and other big corporations while in the legislature and these who know him and his record believe that his nomination would be about the worst thing that could happen to the democrats in this district right now.

There are two candidates for Commissioner from the Eighth Congressional district, E. D. Beard, of Shelbyville and Rodman Keenon, of Harrodsburg.

In view of the fact that the delegates to the convention will have to pay their own railroad fare and hotel expenses while in Louisville, it is not anticipated that there will be much of a rush to get on the delegation from Lincoln.

Crab Orchard, June 7th. On last Sabbath day, a funeral was preached over the remains of an old colored Christian that deserves special mention. Honest, truthful, faithful and true to every trust as a wife, a noble woman, and servant of the proud Caucasian race, whom she gladly and faithfully served. Aunt Julia was the DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For Circuit Judge,
HON. CHARLES A. HAHN, of Mercer County

The Circuit Court has decided the old Standard and Public Schools to be merged into the Public Schools of the county. The County High School is thus provided a home, and the graded school saved the necessity of erecting additional buildings, which otherwise would have been necessary.

We have one of the best schools in the State, one of the grandest Courthouses in Kentucky. Stanford has outgrown the primitive period when all that was needed was a single street stretched out parallel to the creek that the women might be close to wash water. We now need more streets, first that we may have room for means of access to schools, churches, places of business and in the second place there is a present demand for building sites, and new streets must be opened, for without them no such sites are available. The town can be greatly improved in the compactness of its shape, the convenience of its people and in the value of properties by the opening of two short streets which would cost the town but a song. The extension of the street from what is now the Stone property across to Danville street in front of the Alcorn property, and the opening of a street from the Daugherty blacksmith shop on Main street, along and over the line of the school property, across the railroad in front of the new Daugherty warehouse and continuing to a point of later-acquisition with the proposed extended street, would be an improvement which would shorten the distance to school for half the children in town. It would furnish easy needed means of communication with the different sections of town. It would open up some of the most desirable building lots in town. It would put mechanics, carpenters and laboring men to work. It would mean new life to the city.

Gentlemen of the City Council wake up.

Every democratic county convention in the Second Railroad District, which meets next Monday, ought to instruct its delegates to the district convention to vote against Billy Klair for the nomination for Railroad Commissioner. No worse blow could be struck the democracy of the State in the present campaign than to nominate this boiler and saloonkeeper of Lexington for the office to which he aspires. The Georgetown News in its current issues publishes a lengthy editorial showing that Klair has been indicted 12 times for flagrant violations of the law in Lexington. Every democrat who loves his party and the people should see to it that this man is not elected upon his next Wednesday. His nomination will certainly mean the election of another republican on the Railroad Commission from this district.

We want to elect as a Lieut. Governor a man who will not make a joke in his appointment of the Committee on Religion and Morals.—Elizabethtown News.

THE WET INTERESTS IN POLITICS.

(Elizabethtown News.) The question of the extension of the county unit is not a matter of vital importance to the Democratic party of Kentucky. There are many anti-saloon Democrats who doubt both its wisdom and expediency, but the domination of the Democratic party by the "wet" interests in order to prevent the adoption of the county unit, is a matter of paramount concern to the party. These interests, formed by a combination of brewers, distillers and wholesale liquor dealers, believe in the rule or ruin policy. Their Democratic convictions do not extend beyond the interest of the still and hot tub. They are in the Democratic party to control it, if they can, and failing in that, to defeat it. They are directly responsible for the defeat of the last democratic state ticket and the election of Augustus E. Wilson and his associates. They are also responsible for the election of W. O. Bradley, a Republican United States Senator by a Democratic legislature, with methods that are as harmful as those brought to light in the Lorimer investigation in Illinois.

If there is a Democratic convention to make a platform this year, they will seek to control it in every possible way, but if they fail and the County Unit is endorsed in the platform, they will put the treacherous knife into the vital of the party again and seek in every possible way to encompass its defeat. They do not abide by any party action, unless the party accepts their position on the saloon question. No "dry" candidate for either the Senate or the House of Representatives dare offer himself for office that these "wet" interests do not conspire to defeat him. If it is impossible to bring about his defeat in party action, they turn their influence to defeat him after he is nominated. They have no party convictions beyond the stillhouse and are political guerrillas fighting to the death every aspirant for office who does not bow down and accept orders from them.

At two recent meetings of the State Central Committee these interests have been much in evidence and it has been conclusively shown that the committee majority no longer represents the welfare and success of the Democratic party but is under the domination and control of the whiskey and beer interests to carry out its orders even at the expense of the party's success. They have erected their altar in hand, consisting of a whiskey barrel and a beer keg and those who who ask office and fail to do obedience to them are marked for slaughter.

Two years ago these people supported McCrory for United States Senator, not that they loved McCrory, but because his opponent, J. C. W. Beckham, dared to declare for the county unit. Today, because Beckham happens to be for McCrory and for no other reason, these are the people who have chiefly been behind all opposition in the party to McCrory's nomination and are now lending aid and help to Addams whom they have persuaded to believe that he has a chance to be nominated.

We are reasonably indifferent to either the defeat of the adoption of the county unit measure but we are keenly alive and deeply interested in the success of the Democratic party, which means infinitely more to the welfare and advancement of Kentucky than whether a certain number of saloons shall be put out of business or continued in business. We are confident that our position is shared by hosts of Democrats who vote either "dry" or "wet" and by some loyal Democrats engaged in the manufacture of liquor. "Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad," and the policy of the liquor and beer combine is digging its own grave and if persisted in will destroy the very interests it seeks to conserve.

For many years the Louisville and Nashville railroad occupied in Kentucky the position which the "wet" interests occupy to fill. It had control of the Democratic organization in the state when its nominations were equivalent to election. It defeated hosts of fine men who would not wear its collar. The L. & N. had both more brains and character behind it than the beer and liquor crowd but its rule became so distasteful to the party that it was thrown out and repudiated. During all this period the L. & N. had to fight at each session of the legislature many measures which struck at its very vitals. Ten years ago the L. & N. saw the mistake of this policy and withdrew from an active participation in politics and trusted to the wisdom of the people to give it a square deal. It has gotten it and the best of treatment and perfect fairness since it has adopted this policy. What was a wise course for the L. & N. to pursue, and the only course which saved it from unfair and hostile legislation, we commend to the "wet" interests before it is too late. If the people are trusted to deal fairly and justly with any interest, history has demonstrated that the trust has never been misplaced. If the great Democratic party would not submit to the dictation to this greatest organization, with more brains and character behind it than any in the State, we can be very sure that it will not tolerate the hydra-head of bossism that has been raised by the combined liquor interests. They may succeed in defeating the Democratic party if it refuses to do its bidding but it will be the Samson act and they will be forever hurled under the defeat that they bring about. There are tens of thousands of Democrats who are now honestly opposed to the extension of the County Unit who will not submit to the dictation of the Democratic party by the brewers and distillers. No interest is big enough to control the Democratic party and any interest which attempts it marks its own ruin, and courts its own destruction.

Free for Stomach and Bowels

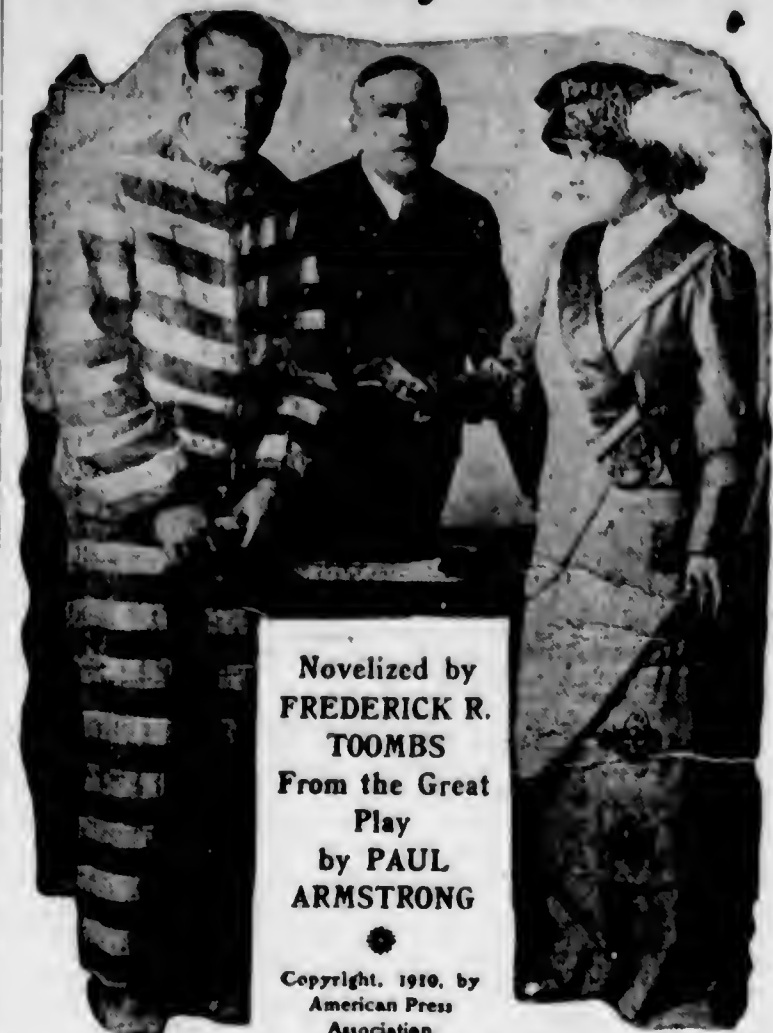

We are in receipt of letters from Mrs. Eva Gaskins, 304 Madison St., Topeka, Kan., and Mr. P. H. Gavelas, Wagoner, Okla., as well as many others, telling about the wonderful results they have secured in the cure of their stomach and liver troubles by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

This remedy, as all readers doubtless know, has been before the public for a generation and is now being used extensively used than any other remedy for stomach, liver and bowel complaints. According to reliable testimony, it seems to be a very quick and lasting cure for constipation, indigestion and dyspepsia, liver trouble, biliousness, headache, sour stomach, gas on the stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar disorders. It is a liquid with tonic effect, and so mild and gentle in action that a child as well as a grown person can take it. In fact, it has no equal for children, women and old people.

It arouses the flow of gastric juices, and by a peculiar action trains the stomach and bowel muscles again to their work naturally, and in time medicine of all kinds can be dispensed with. A free sample bottle can be had for trial by sending your address to the doctor, for in this way Mrs. Gaskins, Mr. Gavelas and many others learned of the cure. Later, when satisfied it is the remedy you need, do not waste time and money by buying a cheap imitation, but get the real Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell does not feel that the purchase of his remedy ends his obligation. He has specialists in stomach, liver and bowel diseases for over forty years and will be pleased to give the reader any advice on the subject free of charge. All are welcome to write him. Whether for the medical advice or the free sample address him Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 622 Caldwell Building, Monticello, Ill.

VALENTINE, WARDEN HANDLER AND ROSE LANE.

Valentine and Avery laughed in their superior knowledge.

"No, no," protested Valentine, "this photograph proves I was at a banquet in St. Paul. I'll beat Doyle and I'll make him like it."

"You can't," was Avery's pessimistic comment.

"You said we couldn't go square, any of us, and we all have," was Valentine's rejoinder. "And if we can beat the thing inside of us that calls we can beat one man that hunts."

A clerk knocked at the door and entered to ascertain if he should now bring in a trayful of cash which Valentine was to count. He was ordered to do so at once, and Avery's face became a study as the young man soon re-entered with a tray on which new banknotes of large denominations were piled among glistening rows of gold coins.

"Great snakes, what a chance!" exclaimed the one time thief, looking from Valentine to the watchman. "This is no place for me. Oh, just for one grab and the quick getaway!" He mopped his wrinkled brow. "I'm sweating like a polar bear on the Fourth of July."

"Haven't got it out of your blood yet, eh?" asked Valentine.

"Not the craving for real money. I learned to let the wheat in the grain elevator alone after a month or two, but coarse money like that—wow!" The old man stared fascinated at the enticing tray.

"Well, we watched each other for awhile," commented Red, pointing to his chief.

"And ain't neither of you ever snatched even one bundle?" asked Avery incredulously.

"No."

"Well, you better get me out of here. I'm going to have lockjaw in both hands in a minute." He reached for his hat and stick.

"No, you're not," put in Valentine.

"Come on, Red," he said, walking to the vault room door. "I'm going to prove to Bill that he's honest. He's going to watch that money till we come back."

Avery cried out in protest, but Red followed his superior, and the time worn thief, who had confessed to his friends the weakness that he well knew yet lurked within him, was left alone in the banking office before a tray containing $63,000 in cash. With reach was the door leading into the open hallway through which it was but a few seconds' dash to the busy street, where a man would immediately be lost to view in the passing throng.

"It's a dirty trick," muttered the old man, starting after the others. A shaft of yellow light reflected from one of the golden coils caught his eye, drove into his very brain, into the thin red blood that coursed through his hardening veins. He stopped. He turned fully around and slowly, with hands eagerly outstretched, tiptoed back to the table bearing the precious burden.

His brows narrowed down over his pale gray eyes, his fingers, long talons in their curved fixedness, began to nervously twitch. Then Avery jerked himself away of a sudden. He straightened himself up and started toward the vault room door to summon Valentine. But even as he did so his glance roved back to the alluring tray. He was drawn to it as the nervous rabbit that succumbs to the lascivious charm of the oscillating head of the hungry python.

He stepped to the tray. He seized two packages of hundred dollar bills, thrust them into his pockets, then clutched two more. The fever had him. His eyes shone with the fire of gone days and gone nights. His poisoned blood anag through his veins. Then he stopped once more. He raised his head.

"And have the coppers after me again," he murmured thoughtfully. He laid down a package. "And 'double cross' a pal that put me straight. Not me, not me!" He replaced the remainder of the money. "And coin that comes crooked never was any good."

Avery stood before the tray of money. Now he looked at the tempting fortune with the sure knowledge that he had conquered—that he had faced his greatest test and had not been found wanting.

The thought of how narrowly he had escaped committing the meanest crime of his career came over him, and he realized that he had been on the verge of plunging himself into the death dealing life from which Valentine had rescued him. Ungovernable rage possessed him at his insane lapse into the self that he had cast from him. He swung his fist at the neatly stacked piles of gold pieces.

"Curse you, curse you!" he cried in frenzy. The tray and its contents crashed to the floor and the money scattered in all directions.

Valentine and Red, hearing the noise, came rushing in from the vault room. They saw the floor littered with banknotes and coins. And crouching forlornly in a chair was the figure of old Bill Avery. His hands were pressed over his eyes, and he sobbed in the agony that gripped the soul which had been restored to him.

CHAPTER XIII.

"TOOK—some of—that money," Avery finally managed to say as he saw his two friends before him. "And you put it back," smiled Valentine. "The minute you touched it you found you couldn't."

"That's it," put in Avery eagerly as he arose and proceeded to aid Red in restoring the scattered money to its place. "I couldn't take it then. Now I can go out of here and know that I'll never steal again."

"You mustn't go until Doyle comes in, for he might see you on the street," warned Valentine. "When he comes you can go out through the vault room and make your getaway while I stall him here."

In talking with Avery, Jimmy Valentine unconsciously fell into the use of the vernacular of his early vocation.

With a parting handshake Avery went out into the vault room, where Red was to exhibit to him the big new safe. The assistant cashier, now that the tray of money had been replaced on the table, picked up the photograph, hung it in the place of another affixed to the wall at the right of his desk and inspected it with pronounced satisfaction.

The hall door opened, and Rose Lane came into the office. The girl was in a peculiar mood that day—there was no denying it. Valentine had always found his benefactor, young though she was, particularly difficult to fathom, and today she was more baffling than ever. She talked at length regarding her plans for the children's Christmas celebration, and, standing before his desk, while he stood behind it, she said, "And I want to know what you want for Christmas?"

"Is there anything I could want?" he answered in low tones. "Thank of what you and two short years have done for me."

"And there's never anything more you want? Don't you ever dream—dreams of, say, two years more?" She turned her eyes to the floor.

"Oh, yes, to go on as I've been going these last two, since your father gave me a position of trust, and make everything good and pile up the money for you."

She drew away from him.

"Haven't you ever thought there might be something I want more than money?"

Valentine hesitated. His voice became intensely serious.

"I don't let myself think of you only as your employee," he finally answered.

Rose turned sideways to him, so that he could not see her face as she delivered her next question, although she would have given much to have been able to watch the expression of the assistant cashier—her assistant cashier—as she asked it.

"But," she ventured, "you must have thought that I would marry some day."

Silence, with Valentine fumbling in embarrassment a pencil which lay upon his desk.

"Yes—I—," he began, but Rose continued his sentence for him.

"And it hurts you to think of it, doesn't it? Say it."

"Yes."

He could endure the situation no longer. The girl had penetrated his very soul with her questions, had uncovered in Jimmy Valentine the secrets of his new life—the secrets which he had resolved to keep buried forever. But now he must speak. He must tell her the truth about his situation as regarded her—part of the truth, at least.

"And the thought of you brings darkness, desolation," he said, keeping a firm grip on the emotions that threatened to unnerve him. "What is the use? You're all there is to live for—to just see you grow and then. You're all there is to life. Men hate loved and slaves have loved and animals that have been saved have loved, but never were the three loves fused in one. And you're good, and your life is clean, while mine—but you know all that." He inclined his face from her.

"I have forgotten," she said simply. "You cannot. And any day the shadow of other days may fall. But I want you to know this and believe it as your God—my love for you is a holy thing, sacred and dentless." Valentine was looking earnestly into her eyes now. His hand was resting on the desk. She seized it in hers and drew him toward her.

"Take me in your arms, Lee," she cried fervently. "I love you. I'll love you till—," Her face was upraised to his as she clung to him. He held her

HE KISSED HER AGAIN AND AGAIN.

In his arms and kissed her again and again. "How I have longed for you—years—years!" Her words were smothered in his kisses.

"There is no end to the happiness you bring," murmured Valentine at the first moment he thought he could spare his lips for conversational purposes.

"Oh," exclaimed Rose, drawing away at arm's length temporarily. "I want to tell you something, Lee, something I've known for years and years—we are going to marry."

He caught her into his arms once more.

"I love you. It will never end," he whispered fondly.

The telephone bell rang at his desk. As he released her and placed the receiver at his ear she enfolded his neck in her arms and kissed him. "Hello!" he called. As the response came she felt a tremor run through him. Haggardness came into his eyes. He seemed almost to forget her presence.

"Yes, yes," he answered. "I'll see the gentleman in a few minutes."

He hung up the receiver. "God," he groaned, "Doyle!"

Valentine turned toward the girl, who surveyed him anxiously.

"What is it?" she asked. She saw that he was deeply worried.

"I don't know," he stammered, "but it is most important—most important."

"Well, I'll run downtown; the car is waiting," she said happily. "Then I'll come back and get you and dad and take you home."

His face had taken on the pallor that marked the visage of men who came from Warden Handler's game of solitaire.

"Yes, but should this man have business which would take me out of town?"

"But you mustn't go out of town—now hear me." She, of course, had not the slightest suspicion of the true importance of that telephone call.

"I won't if there's a way out."

"Well, just don't—just don't," pleaded Rose. "I am going to leave the children here to take care of you."

OUR KIND OF FOLKS.

We want to show the outside world in these lines the kind of people we have in Calloway county out in the country. Mr. John Fair, South of town, has been quite ill for some time and unable to look after his farm. One day last week notice was given in that neighborhood that those who cared to could gather at Mr. Fair's farm and help sow his oats and break his tobacco land. Early on the morning appointed, twenty-eight double teams entered Mr. Fair's fields and began work. Within two hours the oats were in the ground and the tobacco land was broken.

The teams and implements engaged in the work represented an investment of over $10,000, besides the eighteen wagons that hauled the plows from distant farms. It was a magnificent sight to see fifty six horses, one team behind the other, throwing dirt, and we regret that a picture was not taken of the scene to print in the Gazette.

That's the kind of folks we have all over Calloway county. Let a man get sick and factions cut no ice. His neighbors warm up to him, be he Keiser or Holander, Demopop or Republican.

That's the spirit for which the Gazette stands. Those who stand for any other are enemies to society and stumbling blocks in the way of peace, prosperity, charity, fraternity and good fellowship.—Murray Gazette.

How you may profit by it. Take Foley Kidney Pills. Mrs. E. G. Whiting, 360 Willow St., Akron, O., says: "For some time I had a very serious case of kidney trouble and I suffered with backaches and dizzy headaches. I had specks floating before my eyes and I felt all tired out and miserable. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and got a bottle and took them according to directions, and results showed almost at once. The pain and dizzy headaches left me, my eye-sight became clear and to-day I can say I am a well woman, thanks to Foley Kidney Pills."

A TRIBUTE TO MRS. ROOT.

A copy of the paper published at the school for the dead at Sulphur, Oklahoma, in which Miss Etha Belle Root teaches, has just been received here. It contains the following beautiful mention of the death of Mrs. A. D. Root:

The whole school family was pained to hear Thursday evening of the death of the mother of Miss Etha Root, one of our most worthy teachers, which occurred Wednesday, in Roosevelt, Okla. Miss Root was called to her mother's bedside a month ago, and only returned here last Sunday, leaving her mother convalescent, as she thought. On Tuesday she was again called home, and her mother died before she reached there. The father, two brothers, and two sisters took the remains to the old Kentucky home, which the parents had left only a few months ago, and in the tired body away amid the familiar scenes of many happy years, where those who best knew the mother's lovely Christian character may frequently visit her grave, and get inspiration as they meditate upon her beautiful life. Just a few months since, Mrs. Root spent several weeks here, and we all soon came to admire her simple earnest Christian life. Every heart is full of sympathy for the sorrowing relatives, but especially for the devoted daughter, whose life so clearly reflects the influence of the departed mother.

Do Your Cooking in the Cool

A hot kitchen is little better than a prison in summer. But the range is there, so all the cooking and the washing must be done there, too.

What a relief it would be to move the range where you pleased. You can do this with a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove—cook your dinner out on the porch, if you like. It is the only range that is really portable—that works equally well in any place. There are no connections to be made, as in a gas range; no wiring, as with an electric stove; no sooty flues and ash-filled grates, as with coal or wood.

The long, enameled chimneys carry the heat directly up to saucepans, oven or boiler; you get full value from your fuel, without waste.

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners, with long, enameled chimneys, heat directly to the cooking surface. The 2- and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without a cabinet top, which is fitted with drop shelves, towel racks, etc. Dealers everywhere; or write for descriptive circular to the nearest agency of the Standard Oil Company (Incorporated)
